

THIS SUMMER-----

Knowledge Hunt 24/7 = <http://mountainview.gov/library>

It's 8:00 on Sunday night. You've just remembered that you want to find out about the bonobo. No problem! You can get help even when the Library is closed. The Resources Online link on the Mountain View Library website is always open.

Look for the section called Homework. You'll find e- versions of reference books, magazines and newspapers. Some are for students and others for adults. The Library subscribes to these resources only for our cardholders so type in your Name and Library Card number to login after you open a resource.

What you'll need:

1. A Mountain View Library Card
 2. A computer with Internet access at home, school or the Library
 3. The website for the Library = <http://mountainview.gov/library>
- Biography In Context: for biography reports or just because you are interested in a person. Try Melky Cabrera. What is his real name?
 - BrainFuse: Free live tutor, practice tests, skills building, flash cards and crossword and more to help everyone keep their brain strong over the summer and beyond. Create a free account to keep track of how well you do on tests and to communicate with a tutor.
 - Culturegrams: For reports on countries and states and good for travel information.
 - Kids Info Bits: Learn all about the bonobo and much more. Read or listen to an article.
 - Mango Languages: Learn a new language and surprise your teacher.
 - Novelist: Ideas for good books to read. Just type in a title, author or series to start. Love "Big Nate"? Type in "Big Nate" as a series to see other books you may like.
 - World Book Online Encyclopedia will help with many assignments and has fun activity ideas. Start with World Book Kids and look at the list of "Make It" ideas.
 - Espanol? Enciclopedia Estudiantil Hallazgos

Need a book to read at your AR Level? arbookfind.com can help. Use the advanced search to put in a range of levels and to choose the type of book you like.

If you like treasure hunting for knowledge, come to the Library July 2 – 30 and play LIBROLOGY.
